OLD-STYLE FISHING.

Days of Boyhood.

The Glorious Time Preceding the Intro duction of Patent Rods, Reels and Hooks -When "Goin' a-Fishing" Meant More Than It Does To-day.

If I were a boy again I'd go a-fishing, writes M. Quad in the Detroit Free Press. When a man goes a-fishing it's all solid business and no romance. He makes his calculations days ahead, figures on just how bureau, and its presence was kept a sacred secret. Most any sort of a string would do for a fish-line, and the old hunter who once gave me two bullets for sinkers is remem-bered with deepest gratitude to this day. When hook and line and sinkers were wound

When hook and line and sinkers were wound upon a maple chip and tucked away to wait for the fishing season, it was a red-letter day. I would have taken a dozen of the worst lickings a boy could receive rather than give up the treasure, and, had a stranger come along and offered to trade me a horse for the outfit, I should have promptly refused his offer.

When we went to fish in a creek, which was as much as two feet deep in spots, and which a boy could hardly jump across in places, it was a mighty river to me, beside which the discoveries of Hendrick Hudson and De Soto were bantam chickens. There were whales in there, and our only fear was that one of them would nab our angle-worm and break the hook. There were sharks which might seize us if we waded over a riffic ankie deep, and we had heard of the which might seize us if we waded over a riffle anite deep, and we had heard of the devil-fish which lurks under the flood-wood waiting for a barefooted boy to come along with his dinner. True, we never encountered any of these monsters of the deep, and that was the reason why we got safely back home, and why mother heaved a great sigh of satisfaction and said:

"So you are home! Well, I never, never

"So you are home! Well, I never, never expected to see you again!"

A boy's way of fishing is the best way ever invented. They may bring out their fancy rods, reels, flies and patent hooks, but the boy who sticks to the home-made dish-pole, the old-fashioned hook and the twine fish line rubbed down with beeswax isn't going to be left very far behind.

The first we used to pull out-yum! Now adays those you don't catch are the largest.

A quarter of a century ago things were different. Of course, we had some big

In these degenerate days a man will sit on a wharf or a log and bob and jaw, and bob some more and growl, and haul up his line and blast every body's eyes, because he hasn't caught a pickerel eighty-five feet long. The old-fashioned boy would tramp three miles up and down the stream, and never a word of complaint over the expect ribbles. If he got a dozen horned-think of a patent bobber—a self-acting one, at that—and compare it with the cork we used to steal from the molasses jug! And what are these patent sinkers compared to a couple of eight-penny nails or an old door-key which sunk our hooks! They are doing their best, to reduce it to a business, door-key which sunk our hooks! They are doing their best to reduce it to a business, and to destroy all the romance and anticipation, and I for one don'tolike it a bit. In the way-back time a fishing excursion was set down for a month ahead, and it depended on how well we got along with the potatoes and corn. We got our outfit ready a fortnight shead of time. We hunted out the best spots for fish-worms, planned every detail over and over again, and dreamed of creeks and fish and fish-hooks right along every night. The day seemed never-ending, but when we could say "To-morrow!" we dug bait enough to catch every thing in Lake Erie, gave our poles and lines a last looking over and went to bed an hour earlier so as to hurry the night along. Hurry! It was the longest night of the year! We went over the ground a dozen times, planned every thing anew, and got up a score of times to see if the weather was likely to change and bring a bad day. We tumbled and tossed, napped and talked, and when the old clock down-stairs struck the hour of four we slid out of bed and out of the house to find the morning purple staring us in the

to find the morning purple staring us in the face. The fish were waiting for us, and we couldn't keep our pace down to a walk, and we likewise baited our hooks as we ran.

Fishing! Well, the boy of to-day doesn't realize the meaning of the term! He may catch his score of bass or his dozen of pickerel, but he never feels the tingle along the nerves which came to the old-fashioned boy as he felt a six-inch shiner take the

A good dog story comes from Maine to M. Quad Yearns for the Jolly Washington letter-writer. A. C. Buell, a former well known journalist of that city, season on the Penobscot Bay. When not hunting he leaves his dog "Pat," a very fine-bred Irish retriever, in care of a fisherman on the shores of the bay. A few days ago Mr. Buell received a letter from the fisherman telling of a remarkable performance of Pat in rescuing no less than seven persons from a fishing smack that had been thrown on a reef in a heavy gale. The smack was lodged on one of the reefs of Great Spoon Island, about two hundred feet from the shore. The men hoisted signals of distress, and were in momentary danger of being swept away. Tremendous waves were running, and the crowd of excited fishermen on the shore knew that it would be fatal for them to attempt a rescue, as no boat in their possession could live in that sea. Suddenly the one who had in his care the dog Pat bethought him that the dog had been taught to not only retrieve, but to tow culations days ahead, figures on just how many minutes he can spare, and every nibble is reckoned at so much money. He is always out of pocket, and always comes home mad, not to try it again for a whole year. With a boy it is adventure and romance. He has nothing to lose and every thing to gain. He has all the time there is, and if he doesn't catch all the fish in Roaring river it is not his fault. I can remember all about it. In those 'way-back days a real fish-hook was personal property, something to carry to school tied up in a rag and exhibited only to the large boys—boys old enough to appreciate it. At home it was hidden away under the bureau, and its presence was kept a sacred been taught to not only retrieve, but to tow boats by a rope from one point to another, and often when a boat would get adrift he and often when a boat would get adrift he would be sent for it, and would run his nose under the painter till he would come to the end of it, when he would take it in his teeth and fetch the boat to shore.

"Pat" was at once called. A long cod line was attached to a piece of lath and flung as far as possible into the water.

"Pat" promptly spranging a swam to it and

"Pat" promptly sprang in, swam to it, and brought it to the shore. Several times he repeated this performance. The fishermen were in despair. The waves were splashing so high they could not direct the dog's attention to the men on the reef. Finally "Pat" seemed to comprehend that there was something more serious on hand than he had at first thought. He raised his head and looked intently over the water. His eye caught sight of the boat with its signals of distress, and the waves dashing over it.
When the lath with the cod-line attached was again thrown into the water "Pat" at once sprang after it, took the lath in his teeth, and, instead of turning to the shore, struck out through the roaring surf to the reef. Many times he was buried under the waves, but after a few minutes of intense suspense he was seen from the shore clam-bering up the side of the reef, and a great shout went up as the imperiled sailors took hold of him and lifted him into the boat in an almost exhausted condition. In brief me a strong rope was attached to the cod-The men on shore were signalled to haul away, the rope was made fast to the reef and the shore, and one by one the men passed hand over hand from their place of danger, the brave dog following when he had got his second wind.

Mr. Buell thinks that Congress ought to Mr. Buell thinks that Congress ought to vote "Pat" the most elegant silver collar that can be made. "Pat" is from the fam-ous kennels of Tullamore, near Cork, and is a dog of remarkable beauty and sagacity.

different. Of course, we had some big bites—awful bites—regular old monsters, but we didn't lie about the size of the biters. We never put one down at over a hundred pounds, though we could have doubled the weight and found ready believers. In those days nobody ever fished without spiting on his bait. If he wanted to catch an awful big fish he spit twice. There were times when spitting on the bait didn't bring a bite, but no boy ever got discouraged over that. He hadn't given just the right pucker to his mouth, or his hook didn't hang right, or the sky was too bright or too cloudy. Mrs. Rogue: And how's his health?
Mrs. Pogue: Not very good, I imagine; he writes that he is troubled with the right shoulder shift.

Noting Secretary Windom's statement that exclusive of the deposits in the national banks, there is only $14,000,000 in the Treasury available for the purchase of bonds, some of the most pronounced goldite papers of the East cannot conceal apprehensions of a stringency in the money market. The Salt Lake Tribune says: The Philadelphia Press states the situation, the chief points of which are that last week there was left $6,630,100 surplus in the banks in New York against $27,734,400 at the same time last year. Since then $4,500,000 in gold has been withdrawn for Europe. The chief call for gold is from France, and the estimate is that Americans in Europe will spend $100,000,000 this year. Then many foreign holders of railroad stocks are unloading; then America pays to European steamship companies $150,000,000 per annum, and our imports in 1888 exceeded our exports by $33,-457,691, and by nearly as much durpresent year. The Press hopes for a change through increasing exports, and then, to comfort itself, says the country does not depend upon the bride's mother, Mrs. Barney. upon New York City banks any. Bierce heard of the intended visit, and way. But could a great, producing nation make a much worse showing than the above? With all our workers, all our wheat and corn and meat and cotton we can not keep even with the world. There is a reason. The producers get nothing for their products, and the interest gatherers spend their money in Europe. One cheap English ship that carries wheat across the sea absorbs in freights as much as the farmers in whole townships receive for the wheat. Under the pressure all except the most necessary and cheapest freights are withheld from the railroads; they cannot pay interest on their cost and the foreign bondholders are and the foreign bondholders are unloading for what they can get. The great purchases which we hear of by English syndicates are mere trades. English capitalists unload their railway bonds and with the money buy a brewery or somemoney buy a brewery or somemoney buy a brewery or something else. Meanwhile prices continue to fall. There may be no panic and crush this year, but it is only a question of time. Unless a return shall be made and silver be a return shall be made and silver be. return shall be made and silver be given back its old rightful place, the country will not bear the pressure through the moving of next chances for recovery are one in ten year's crops. The leaving to Great Britain to fix the price at which she will handle our silver gives her the opportunity to fix the price of everything else that this country produces, and the business of England is not that of a philanthropist. Rather she is working to draw to herself all the surplus wealth of the world, and, so far as possible, our statesmen are assisting her. By another year the security which the interest-gatherers hold will no longer be good, and then there will be a panic and crush that will shake the continent financially, as the earth is at long intervals rent and torn by an overwhelming cata-

Сисо, Cal., July 26.—The elopement which occurred here a few days ago culminated in a tragedy this afternoon. A wedding was to have taken place last Monday between a young apartments, in which many guests, man named Raymond Bierce, son of the San Francisco journalist, and Miss chapel, were seated. Upon reaching Eva Adkins, a beautiful young lady 17 years of age. Bierce's most intimate friend was a handsome young man named Neil Hubbs, and he was to have acted as best man at the wedding ceremony. Hubbs re-entered the room and beat Bierce to the floor with his revolver. Bierce then dragged himself into an adjoining room, placed the pistol to his head and blew his brains out. He lived about an hour and a half. Bierce also received two bullets in the body, and Hubbs was shot through the abdomen, the bullet penetrating the spleen. His recovery is very doubtful.

Further Action Postponed New York, July 27.—The Trustees of the North American Salt Company have authorized the following: "While the subscriptions have been very numerous in the aggregate, the Trustees feel they are not justified in proceeding to an allotment of the shares on the present basis, without a further conference with subscribers and venders. This is on account of the subscribers being on both sides of the Atlantic, and the venders widely separated, and it will take time. It has also been decided to return the subscription and postpone further action until these negotiations can be completed.

There was but a single wound upon the back of the head, as if the blow had been given from behind. The theory now prevalent is that the murderer is Charles Bligh, a colored servant. Bligh was at the house all day yesterday, and told of his flast interview with the Colonel. When he left last night he said he would return at 5:30 this morning, but has not been around. A Royal Family Marriage

LONDON, July 27,-Princess Louise, This is the first marriage that ever therefore limited.

The bride and groom arrived privately. The Princess of Wales, Crown Prince of Denmark, King of Greece, Prince Albert Victor and Prince George of Wales assembled in the bow library of the Palace at 11:40, and there awaited the arrival of the Queen from her private apartments.

The bridal party, consisting of the Princess of Wales, Princess Louise, A JURY BRIBER SENTENCED Princess Victoria and Princes Mauda of Wales, left the Marlborough house, the residence of the Prince of Wales, at 11:40 for Buckingham Palace. Notwithstanding the rain, the route to the Palace was crowded with spectators. There was a vast concourse of people opposite the Palace. The Prince of Wales was enthusiastically

On arrival in the bow library of the Queen, accompanied by the Grand Duke of Hesse, the procession to the chapel was formed. It was comprised of the Queen, members of the royal family, the King of Greece, Crown the chapel, the royal personages took seats on either side of the altar.

The Earl of Fife, who was attired in a highland costume, and wore a garter of duffs, accompanied by groomsman Horace Farquhar, took position at the altar rail, and awaited the coming of bride. The Prince of Wales, with the bride. The Prince of Wales, with the bride, and Princess Victoria and Mauda of Wales, and the members of the household arrived at the palace just before noon. They were received by Lord Steward and conducted to the bow library, where the bride, joined by the brides-maids, Princesses Victoria and Mauda of Wales, Princess I Louise of Schlesweig-Holstein, Princesses Louise of Schlesweig-Holstein, Princess Victoria of Teck, Countess Fedora Greichen, Countess Victoria Gleicdet and Countess Helena Gleichen. The bridal party then proceeded to the chapel. The b.ide wore a Duchess dress of white satin with flowing train, trimmed with orange blossoms, a wreath of orange blossoms and point

The brides-maids were dresses of plush pink faille and carried bouquets of pink roses. The clergymen officiating were the Archbishop of Canterberry, the Bishop of London, the Dean of Windsor, domestic chaplain to the Queen, Rev. F. A. J. Harvey, domestic chaplain to the Prince of Wales and the Rev. T. Teigmouth Shore. The Prince of Wales gave away the bride. Prince of Wales gave away the bride Prince of Wales gave away the bride. The choral service was sung by the choir of Chapel Royal St. James. The feature of the service was the singing of a special anthem entitled "O, Perfect Love," composed by Joseph Barnaby. Many of the Ministers were present. Gladstone was also among the guests. The Queen wore a dress of black brocade, and appeared to be in excellent health and spirits. The Princess of Wales was attired in a Princess of Wales was attired in a pearl-gray satin, brocaded with silver and a tiara of diamonds. After the benediction the Queen kissed the bride and cordially greeted the groom.

After the wedding there were two breakfast parties in Buckingham Pal-ace. One party consisted of the bride and groom, the Queen and other royal personages. Toasts were given to the Queen and groom. After breakfast the groom and bride, the Princess of Wales and brides-maids returned to Marl-borough House, the bride and groom occupying the first carriage. Later in the afternoon the newly married couple departed for the Sheer House, the suburban residence of the Earl of Fife, where a portion of the honeymoon will be spent.

The Settlers Alarmed

Washington, July 27 .- The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has received a telegram from R. A. N. Harvey, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee, through Indian Agent Cole at the Colville Agency. Stevens county. Washington Territory, saying the Indians attached to the Colville Agency had burned eight square miles of hay land, and threaten the lives of settlers, many of whom are guarding their dwellings and haystacks. The settlers have signed a petition requesting that a company of soldiers be sent them to protect property and perhaps their lives. Agent Cole joins the committee in asking that immediate action be taken. A telegram has been received by the Secretary or War which requests that the military officers visit the seat of trouble and be directed to promptly investigate the matter and take such action as may be deemed necessary.

The object of the meeting ostensibly is a combination of the large houses in the trade for the purpose of obtaining lower rates of freight, quicker and better transportation, and a concentration of shipments to two or three of the most important Northern cities. of the most important Northern cities.

The real object is to form an orange trust, which will control the entire Florida orange crop, direct the packing and shipping and confine the sale of oranges to members. The call for the meeting was sent out by one of the largest dealers in Florida oranges in this city, and several wealthy firms are said to be ready to furnish the financial backing that will be necessary. It is proposed to form a pool of sary. It is proposed to form a pool of one hundred leading fruit merchants and each one of whom is to contribute $10,000. This will make a total capital of a million dollars. With this amount packing houses are to be built at different points in Florida, and the whole business of sorting, packing and shipping fruit will be conducted. The entire orange crop of Florida is to be contracted and shipped to the members of the pool in New York, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New Orleans and possibly other cities. The promoters of the scheme claim it is not a trust, but a co-operative arrangement for the benefit of the growers, shippers and sellers. The growers will be asked to sign contracts, disposing of their crop sary. It is proposed to form a pool of one hundred leading fruit merchants sign contracts, disposing of their crop on the trees at a uniform rate of one dollar a box for five years. The fruit will be sold at auction to the trade. All private sales will be stopped, and the demand for fruit will regulate the

> An Old Claim to Chicago Property CHICAGO, July 27 .- To a reporter who saw him in regard to Hiram Pearson's will, T. C. Hill, to whom he bequeathed $400,000 for charity, said: "The Chicago property mentioned as belongs to the estate, and, therefore, 508 Supreme Court some time ago decided Supreme Court some time ago decided that Pearson had no title in the property. The will was evidently drawn before the Supreme Court decision was given. The property claimed by Pearson was in the Walker addition, in Lumber District, on the southwest side, along the south branch of the river. Pearson's father purchased the property along in the '30s and subproperty along in the '30s and sub-divided it, laying out streets, etc., but in '42 sold it to Samuel Walker. Walker replatted the land, and the streets he made diagonally across those laid by Pearson. The latter purported to have found an old statute providing that Walker's replatting of the land was illegal, and that, therefore, the land, or certain portions of it, reverted to him (Pearson). The court upheld this view of the case, and Pearson got back his land, which descended to his son. A year ago the Supreme Court decided that the claim was invalid.

Estimating a Train's Speed.

Inquiry is frequently made as to how the speed of a train may be estimated. The traveler especially is curious about the speed his train is making, and we suggest three methods by which the speed may be guessed with remarkable accuracy, as follows:

1. Watch for the passage of the train by the large white mile posts with black fig-ures upon them, and divide 3,600 by the time in seconds between posts; the result is the

in seconds between posts; the result is the speed in miles per hour.

2. Listen attentively until the ear distinguishes the click, click, click of the wheel as it passes a rail joint. The number of clicks upon one side of the car in twenty seconds is the speed in miles per hour, where the rails are thirty feet in length, and this is the case generally.

where the rails are thirty feet in length, and this is the case generally.

3. Count the number of telegraph poles passed in two minutes, if there are four or five wires to a pole, and in two minutes and twenty seconds if there are only one or two lines per pole; the number of poles passed is the number of miles per hour at which the train is traveling.—Household.

Narrow Escape from Death of a Coroner Who Took a Good Whiff.

I propose in this letter to mention briefly some of the American girls who have wedded Frenchmen, and to give you some little idea of themselves and their families, writes a Paris sorrespondent of the New York Mail and Express. Either would have fallen without the support of the other. I held on to him and called for fresh air. We from New York led the cotulon, or "ger-man," as we say in America. I was very proud to see all those dancers following held on to him and called for fresh air. We were led to the door and down two or three flights of stairs. It was with the greatest difficulty that I drew my breath. My consciousness was perfect, but I had no control of my arms or hands or of my lower limbs. When I tried to step I raised my feet two feet from the ground, and when I tried to feel my pusle I could not use my hands; I noticed that the blood had left the finger-nails and that my hands were white as chalk. All through my body it seemed the lead of two of my compatriots. One of Mme. Waddington's sisters married Hon. Eugene Schuyler. They were born in Paris, of English parents, and educated in English as well as in French schools. Mr. Richard Waddington's wife is Scotch, and they all speak English as easily as French, although Mr. William Waddington onco said to me that if he wished to make a speech as chalk. All through my body it seemed as though the blood were driving toward my heart. How I got to the drug store I don't know. A young man there said sul-phate of magnesia was an antidote for prussic acid, but it isn't. I took the dose, how-ever, and then was led to the police station. Captain Killilea prescribed brandy; and as he believes in large doses, he gave me so much that I was drunk after taking it. I he preferred to do so in French. The wife of another distinguished French public man told Captain Killilea of my difficulty in breathing, and told him how to move my arms up and down. He lifted a window in the police station and worked my arms like Greenwich, Conn., and first met her future husband at a well-known Connecticut young ladies' boarding-school, where young a pump for a long time, causing an artificial movement of the ribs. Then I was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital, and a physician gave me a dose of carbonate of ammonia. In two hours I felt better and came home. I Dr. Clemenceau was the French teacher. Mme. THE WRONG FUNERAL

How a Chicago Lady Came to Place a Wreath on a Stranger's Grave. Speaking of funerals, says the Chicago urnal Stroller, reminds me of a decidedly funny thing that happened the other day to a friend of mine, and, with all due reverence, it is a fact that funny things will ometimes happen upon these occasions. My friend, whose husband was one of the pall-bearers, was obliged to occupy the carriage alone. The services were quite lengthy in church, and, as it was a bitterly cold day, the driver deemed it advisable to warm up a little at a convenient place op posite the church. After the services were over all the carriages had departed, when my friend, who had been vainly trying to find her driver, discovered him, and, hurriedly entering her carriage, told him to whip up and overtake the procession. Evidently the warming-up process had been the means of muddling the driver's brain a little. They overtook the funeral and were driven to the depot to take the cars for the cemetery—the Milwaukee & ilies. She got a divorce a short time ago from her Lothario of a husband, who has since married another American. The sis-ter of the Marchioness was one of the pret-tiest young girls in Paris when she was in her teens—she may be yet, but I have not St. Paul. After reaching the cemetery my friend was surprised to observe that for a small woman the casket was unnecessarily large, and that after leaving the church the pall-bearers were changed, as her husband was not among them. Neither was there a face she knew. The services at the grave being over, they were about to return to the cars, when upon the other side of the depot platform the Chicago & Northwestern train came in, and she was horrified to see her husband act ing in the capacity of pall-bearer, tender ly lifting a casket from the cars. It took her several minutes to make him comprehend what was the matter, and to get him to go with her to the grave she had just left to get a wreath she so carefully placed there, sent by a society of which she
